BRYCE URGES PEACE LEAGUE

Declares Britain Will Help United States When

War Is Over

London, Nov. 14.—Viscount Bryce appealed to the United States to-day to begin drafting the plans for a league to enforce peace. Speaking at a meeting of the Marfower Club, which is composed of British and Americans and HORTENSE IS SAFE

The United States has hitherto stood apart in isolation, but isolation is no longer possible. Every country is now affected and its safety threatened Mrs. Bradley and Warden by the spirit of anti-democratic agyou in this week's issue of gression. The United States has avoided entangling alliances, but a league of peace would be no entangling alliance. It would be a smoothing down and straightening out of difficulties that threaten to embroil the world.

"Already many leading statesmen months to disrupt the summer colony have proposed such a scheme as I have outlined. Both Mr. Wilson and Mr. J. A. Roberge acted as mediator and Hughes have given it their hearty approval; public opinion in both parties 14. The British alike is daily growing in its favor.

own hands he knocked down a bit the spite fence. Then the hatche interred with bentting ceremony deals and let us consecrate our friendship in an effort to secure for mankind the blessing of an enduring peace.

Referring to the Presidential election in the United States Lord Bryce said:
"All that would be fitting to say here is that we admire the tranquility and perfect order with which such a gigantic piece of work as the casting of a vote over a whole continent has been conducted, and we admire no less the dignity and moderation of language displayed during the exciting contest by the two candidates, both men conspicuous for their ability and force of character.

Friendship Not Threatened "Questions as to the exercise of belligerent rights have always arisen and must always be expected to arise between belligerents and neutrals in naval war. Those that have arisen between the Allies and the United States are happily such as can be disposed of by pacific negotiations, and need not affect the permanent friendship of peoples attached to one another by so many ties. At this moment the friendship of our two nations is of more importance, not only to both of us, but to tworld, than perhaps ever before.

"For what is the state of the world? This war has brought upon it more widespread calamities than any previous war. We are asking ourselves whether we must expect such calamities to go on recurring in the future. Is all this suffering to have been vain? After the war will international fears, hatreds and suspicions return and will great armaments—a still heavier burden to already impoverished peoples—have again to be maintained?

Since the last session the whole supply question has become of paramount importance, and the press and public are unanimous in demanding immediate action which will allow the people to benefit from the plentiful resources of the country. These, if properly handled, it is contended, would be sufficient to provide for the entire population at prices not exceeding those in the other countries at war.

Tells Farmers That Bigger Charges Scheme to Force Him Out-Fight Over

Ottawa, Nov. 14 .- Sir Robert Borden,

Canadian Prime Ministership to another, under whom it is well known I would not serve."

The letters showed that the appointment of Sir George Perley as Gverseas Minister of Militia led to the differences between the Premier and Sir Sam Hughes. The latter's intimation that the Premier and Sir George Perley had secretly planned the creation of this office led to the request for the resignation of Sir Sam. The latter declared in his letter that there was no more need for a separate Minister of Premier Borden issued a statement to-day denying emphatically that he was about to retire.

"The public opinion of this country would not have tolerated the prolongation of the war by the continued liberty of British subjects to trade with and so enrich the firms in foreign countries whose wealth and influence were alike at the services of the enemy."

The note is based largely on the argument that there is no assumption by Great Britain of power to interfere with neutral traders, but that the blacklist is a matter of municipal law enjoining British subjects from trading with persons found to be assisting or rendering service to the enemy. It disclaims any intention of imposing penalties or disabilities upon neutral trade.

that there is serious danger to neutral commerce generally in the British ability to extend the list where it seems expedient, the note says that this is true, but that the American government may rest assured that "this system of prohibitions will not be carried further than is absolutely necessary."

"It has been forced upon us." continues the note, "by the circumstances of the present war. To extend it beyond what is required in order to secure its immediate purpose—the weakening of the resources of our opponents—or to allow it to interfere with what is really the genuine neutral trade of a country with which we desire to have the closest commercial intercourse, would be contrary to British interests. The advantage derived from a cemmercial transaction between a British subject and a foreigner is mutual."

It points to the destruction of tonnage by German submarines, and says that, if no other factor entered into the question, the British coal supply should be conserved to be certain that there is enough for ships supplying the Belgian Relief Commission.

Discussing the argument that there is apprehension that potential control of transportation by one nation might be used to disrupt the trade of the note asserts:

"His Majesty's government therefore take this opportunity to declare that they are not unmindful of the obligations of those who possess sea power on of that traditional policy pursued by the British Empire by which such power has been exercised in the interests of freedom.
